Highlights of ILP October & November

Launch of ILP Evaluation Report

The ILP report - Evaluating the Impact of Ireland's Instructional Leadership Programme: Post-Primary Teachers' Practice and Student Engagement was launched on 12th October by an Taoiseach Micháel Martin. This important research study was commissioned by ILP/ETBI and conducted independently by researchers at Dublin City University, led by Dr Barry Morrissey. The report examines how participation in the ILP has impacted on post-primary teachers' individual and collective professional practice, as well as student engagement. We look forward to using the findings to inform the future development of the programme.

Annual Education Research Summit

On the 5th November, Dr. Barry Morrissey was at the Annual Education Research Summit presenting on the impact of the Instructional Leadership Programme (ILP).

His session focused on how the ILP actively enhances classroom practices, empowers teachers, and drives deeper student engagement. It was great to see the tangible impact of this programme spotlighted on the national stage as part of Ireland's EU Presidency Associated Events!

KCETB Community of Practice

In November teachers participating in the KCETB ILP Community of Practice came together in Kilkenny to reconnect with their professional learning, share experiences and reflect on the implementation of their (ILP) learning within their schools.

A key focus of the session was developing fluency in the language of instructional leadership and exploring how this shared language supports meaningful conversations about teaching, learning and student engagement. Participants reflected on their growth as instructional leaders and examined the impact of their work to date.
